SUPER TUESDAY: SUPER DIVERSE NATION?

Thursday, 31 January 2008

5:15 for 5:30 pm

History Room, S223, Quadrangle, The University of Sydney

Professor Peter H. Schuck

Yale University

In a history- making election year, what is driving Americans in terms of issues and their very identity as a nation? Why is immigration emerging as a hot topic in the election? What is the role of changing demographics in the country? Professor Peter H. Schuck will offer insights into American thinking as the US goes to the polls and the world watches.

US President Short Courses

The University's Centre for Continuing Education offers two fun and interesting courses with a US president theme!

The Election of a President

In November 2008, the Americans, or at least some of them, will go to the polls and elect a new president. Track the candidates and examine the history and procedure of the US electoral process and how it evolved.

Shoot the President:

power, politics and the presidency in American film

American-born Variety film critic Eddie Cockrell will explore the intersection of Hollywood and Washington, presenting clips and features showing dramatic portrayals of US presidents. Explore with him as well fictional commanders in chief and films that depict and question the American political system.
